

Did You Know?

(NAPS)—Data from safety monitoring systems continues to show vaccines are safe for pregnant people and their babies and getting vaccinated is much safer than contracting COVID-19. For more information and to find a vaccine, visit www.vaccines.gov.

Keeping your mail secure is always a priority for the U.S. Postal Inspection Service, but during the holidays it's even more important to keep your mail safe and your holidays happy. For hints on how you can help, visit www.uspis.gov.

Data from safety monitoring systems continues to show vaccines are safe for pregnant people and their babies and getting vaccinated is much safer than contracting COVID-19. For more information and to find a vaccine, visit www.vaccines.gov.

Hope appears to be at hand for people paralyzed by spinal cord injuries. A drug, NVG-291, now in clinical trials by NervGen, actually creates new neural pathways via the extraordinary process of neural plasticity. Learn more at www.nervgen.com.

Data from safety monitoring systems continues to show vaccines are safe for pregnant people and their babies and getting vaccinated is much safer than contracting COVID-19. For more information and to find a vaccine, visit www.vaccines.gov.

For more information and to find a vaccine, visit www.vaccines.gov.

After the last year or so, many people are anxious to get back into the social swing. For recipe ideas featuring Seagram's Escapes, which come in assorted flavors, excellent for mixing a quick no-fuss cocktail, visit www.seagramsescapes.com/recipes.

Data from safety monitoring systems continues to show vaccines are safe for pregnant people and their babies and getting vaccinated is much safer than contracting COVID-19. For more information and to find a vaccine, visit www.vaccines.gov.

Data from safety monitoring systems continues to show vaccines are safe for pregnant people and their babies and getting vaccinated is much safer than contracting COVID-19. For more information and to find a vaccine, visit www.vaccines.gov.